Bangor, Maine/Bar Harbor
For the folks of the 20th century, Bar Harbor was the most noted seaside town along the 3.5-mile-long coastline of Maine. Here and elsewhere along the coast of Maine, picturesque little villages and grand mansions dot the many cliff-topped points of land. In mid-19th century, these lovely seaside towns became popular for summer resorts. The island gained notoriety as a playground of the

In the 1880s, a group of New Yorkers, including Henry Flagler and John D. Rockefeller, among others, built a series of grand homes in the area. These homes were used as summer mansions by the wealthy, and they were known as “rusticators.” Seduced by its rugged, tranquil beauty, they built sprawling seaside cottages. The turn-of-the-century homes within Acadia National Park are used to visit scenic spots, including the island’s lighthouses and rocky coastline. 
Dear Carolina Alumni and Friends,

"...[T]he more you travel, the more you realize...
~ Eleanor Roosevelt

"Maine, the Gem of New England..." ~ Maine state song

"...[I]n a country where you might feel 'off the beaten path,' you are actually on the beaten path..."
~ U.S. president (1933-1945), Franklin D. Roosevelt

Thank you for your continued support of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill through Carolina Alumni Travel. Their experienced, professional staff has offered the Alumni and Friends of the University of North Carolina a trip to Coastal Maine & New Brunswick. Over the last 30 years, Carolina Alumni Travel has become the nation’s leading provider of travel programs for alumni and friends of universities.

With its coastline, rivers, lakes and mountains, Maine is ideal for outdoor activities. It offers year-round sports such as cross-country skiing and snowmobiling in the winter and boating, camping and kayaking in the summer. From Acadia National Park, with its world-renowned sites, to the Bangor area, with its great baseball museum, you will experience Maine’s charm.

Crossing the border into New Brunswick, Canada, you can explore the area’s history and culture. Campobello Island, a popular destination for American celebrities, is a must-see. The Bay of Fundy, the world’s highest tides, offers incredible scenic views and opportunities to sample seafood.

In addition, you will have the opportunity to meet several University of North Carolina presidents, as well as current and former faculty and students. These former Carolina Alumni offer the best insights on the campus and its vision for the future.
