COMMEMORATING
150 YEARS

THE UNC GENERAL ALUMNI ASSOCIATION IS PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE ANOTHER SEMESTER OF CLASSES DESIGNED TO HIGHLIGHT THE RECONSTRUCTION PERIOD 150 YEARS LATER. THE CLASSES AND FIELD STUDIES CORRESPOND WITH THE EVENTS, THEMES AND PERSONALITIES OF THIS ERA.

Please join us as we explore the issues and events of civil strife that defined us as a nation and remain with us 150 years later.

For additional information, please visit alumni.unc.edu/civilwar.

If you have questions or would like to join the mailing list, please contact Megan Hardy ’17 at megan_hardy@unc.edu or (919) 843-0790.

YOUR LECTURER

FRED W. KIGER ’74 (’77 MAT) leads our Civil War battlefield study programs and teaches several GAA courses each semester. Freddie has over 30 years of teaching experience. He is the creator of the field guide, The Civil War: A History of the War Between the States (Workman) and has two degrees from UNC: a bachelor’s in history and a master’s of arts in teaching with an emphasis in history.

For more information on the General Alumni Association, visit us on the Web at alumni.unc.edu.

Harriet Tubman

After the war, she was labeled the "most hated man in the South." This session follows the post-war life of one of the most controversial figures in the Confederacy and post-war South.

Tuesday, January 12 • After the War: Jefferson Davis

Defeated, pursued, captured and imprisoned, Jefferson Davis became a tragic figure in American history. This class follows the fallen Confederate president from his capture to his release and from his role as tortured soul to Southern martyr.

Thursday, February 4 • The 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments

Collectively, they are known as the Reconstruction amendments. Interestingly, these three expanded the power of the federal government and provided social change that was unprecedented. We gather to understand their passage, impact and continuing story as, even today, we struggle with the completeness of their application.

Monday, February 22 • Harriet Tubman

To those on the Underground Railroad, she was Moses. To slave owners, Harriet Tubman was a fiery and passionate abolitionist who organized and led African-American military operations within the Confederacy. This class details the life and courage of this extraordinary woman.

Thursday, March 21 • Reconstruction, Part II

The Union won the war and, now, wanted to win the peace. Yet with the backdrop of a victorious North and devastated South, the years 1865-77 became a second "battleground." During this session, we pick up the story in 1865 when, amidst unrest in the world-turned-upside-down South, the executive and legislative bodies of the federal squabbled off to begun unprecedented battles.

Thursday, April 14 • Zebulon Vance

He may still be the best stump speaker in North Carolina's political history. In multiple roles, he served the Old North State with a quick wit that could be as sharp as his defense of local self-government and personal rights. That wit would be commonly tested in post-war North Carolina but he rallied to provide such powerful leadership that, to honor him, his statue remains one of North Carolina's two in the National Statuary Collection inside the United States Capitol.

Classes

Tuesday, April 28 • Reconstruction in the Old North State, Part II

Though the great conflict was over the bitterness between North Carolina Unionists and Confederates continued. This class will continue the story in 1868 as Federal occupation lingered in the Old North State—a circumstance that heightened political turmoil and social unrest.

Thursday, May 12 • Lee: The Marble Man

To many, particularly in the South, Robert E. Lee—like George Washington and Abraham Lincoln—has gained a select pantheon of American heroes. Whose aura has transformed him from human being to icon. This class delves into how that happened, how it has manifested itself in the past and continues to do so—often controversially—in the present.

Thursday, May 26 • The Lost Cause

The architects of the Lost Cause sought to justify their own actions, allow themselves and other Southerners to find something positive in defeat and provide future generations with a "correct" narrative of the War. This session takes a look at some of the architects, their motivation and the crusade itself.

Thursday, June 9 • Unlikely Associates: Ulysses S. Grant and Mark Twain

One was the greatest general of his time. The other proved to be one of this country's greatest writers. This session spins the tale of their connection and friendship. Given the backdrop of Grant's final days, this is a story of inspiration and desperation, of genius and ruin. Join us as we capture a powerful moment in the lives of two influential Americans and the age they represented.

Tuesday, June 14 • UNC and Chapel Hill during Reconstruction

Due to the overwhelming interest in this session, we offer an encore. The University of North Carolina—UNC—joined a select pantheon of American heroes during its role as "the university of the South." It is this narrative that we will explore, yet again, to recount that tumultuous period.

Field-Study Trip

April 29–May 1 • Wilmington and the North Carolina Coast

As strongly suggested by those that attend our sessions, we will make a spring excursion to a region that was seen as the "backbone to Richmond" and, as the war continued, the site of the last remaining Confederate port open to the outside world. Our trip to Wilmington will be highlighted with a visit to one of the Federal objectives in spring of 1862—Fort Macon, then continuing on to Wilmington, we will visit the site of Fort Fisher—the "Gibraltar of the Confederacy." Daily presentations and discussions on the importance of North Carolina's coast will enhance our experience with the changing landscape and good food from the Atlantic.

Lecturer, Fred W. Kiger '74 (77 MAT)

Tuition: $350; GAA members pay only $250

Departs from Chapel Hill, includes two-night lodging, round-trip transportation, site fees and five meals

Attendance is limited to 40 people

If you are interested in this trip, please contact Douglas Payne '04 at douglas_payne@unc.edu or (919) 962-0313. View the tentative itinerary at alumni.unc.edu/civilwar.

Ourтур requires a minimum of 25 participants.
